
conditional probability distributions. The search criterion we consider, lower bound, is introduced and investigated. We show that any Bayesian network with the property that for any pair of variables there is a probability distribution that explains the conditional probability distribution of each of them given the other has a lower bound equal to the Bayesian Network Bliss-Pappus-Seidman score. This result is established in a constructive manner, involving a presentation of an algorithm for the search. Some empirical results on networks from the public domain are reported and compared with known results. Historical Overview of the Dering Master The Dering Master was inherited from the family of Gerard Legrande de Lenheron and brought to England by his son in 1539. His date of death has never been recorded, but we can safely assume that he died before the year 1557. Gardner Legrande de Lenheron Le Grand The 'master' part of Dering Master's name derived from the fact that his pieces were produced by the 'Master of the Dering' guild, as was common for the higher ranking craftsmen of the day. He is mentioned in some record books as a 'Mister', but it is quite clear that he and his father before him were Frenchmen. The 'Gerard' part
