Q: Why is customer.default_billing.address empty in the print statement? My code to get a default billing address from Magento is below

public function __construct(){ $this->_attributes =
Mage::getSingleton('customer/session')->isLoggedIn() ?
$this->_getAttribute('default_billing_address', true) : array(); } public function getDefaultBillingAddress($store = null) { $default =
$this->_attributes['default_billing_address']; if (!empty($default)) {
$storeId = Mage::app()->getStore($default['store_id'])->getId();
$address = $this->_addressRepository->get($storeId, $default); }
return $address; }

The variable $default is empty. By the way I put this function in Observer.php How can I get an empty value for this variable? A: There is a bug in the Magento core which causes this; comments on the github ticket: Your observer will be called again when this ticket is fixed but you should be able to run a self-prepared version of the current code for a bit until it is fixed.
