The issue is that when the first gear slides along its gear and the second gear stops the slide, there is a significant back and forth movement. I am trying to apply a lateral force to prevent this. I am using a solenoid to apply an axial force, but the direction of the force is changing direction a few times during a slide. I am suspecting that the rotation of the gears is causing this issue. I am looking for solutions that may be looking to fix this problem. Solutions such as using a larger gear ratio or a larger diameter drive gear may not be available. A: The back-and-forth movement is due to the side forces acting on the sliding gear. You can reduce this by using a thicker gear. If you use a thick gear with a thinner gear in the back, you can insert a wedge in the back (or find another way to compensate for the back force, perhaps with a steel piece). You can also use different friction products for the different gears. (But remember to use the same kind of grease on all parts that contact each other, in e79caf774b

Ask HN: How to encourage people to practice programming? - 1337biz I am one of many people that enjoy programming but am somehow stuck at the start-up phase. I also have great ideas for several projects. I also have a wish to learn more about how to prepare the set up of a development environment for myself and how to actually create something. Since I lack time I have been looking at how to get someone to do it for me. I go to meetups, share, collaborate with my peers and so on but apart from other programmers and beginners, I have a hard time getting around my problem. How can I get on to a level of programming where others can become interested in the process of programming? ===== borplk Use an IDE and go for it. If you have ever written basic programming then you're fine. Most people learn it in their own time, but you're in need of providing the environment so others can learn. Just learn the basic syntax and concepts of programming. Just keep on learning and if you find yourself writing code then it's probably good code. I don't think there is anything you can do without actually going for it and trying. ----- mister_hn Try reading books, magazines and blogs, but don't expect to master all the important things all of a sudden. Nothing improves your skills more than practicing. In vitro characterization of the gastric emptying of solid food and liquid nutrients. The methods currently used to measure gastric emptying rate have several limitations: they are based on ultrasonography, scintigraphic techniques with radiolabeled compounds, or use radio-opaque markers. The aim of this study was to demonstrate the in vitro measurement of gastric emptying rate of solid and liquid nutrients using the recently developed gastric probe (Gastrostat). The gastric probe was designed for the in vitro dynamic measurement of the gastric volume. Solid food and liquid nutrients were placed in a gastric probe, labeled, and dispersed throughout the test meal. Gastric probe was analyzed using the Gastrostat software. The gastric probe was calibrated with 40 mL of water before each experiment. The results were compared
