But the more valuable it is to your trade partners, the more valuable the commodity is to you. And dealing with these intricacies of resource trading is as much a job as managing your stats and resources. The problem with this is that it's handled abysmally. There is no attribute of the game for trade. It would be insanely easy to implement one that scales the resources properly or penalises players for sending too much of one type of resource at a time etc. Imagine doing a trading mission you only had the one choice of a known commodity, which you were told was going to drop in large quantities. This would be a fantastic way to discourage
