Q: Mocking a function which takes an argument with `Any` type I have a function which takes an argument of any type as parameter. Here is the function signature: fun SomeClass.sendMessage(message: Any) And here is the method signature: fun SomeClass.doSomething(message: Any) From the sdk itself, I understand it can't be mock with Mockito because the arguments can be of any type. Is there a way to get it mock anyway? A: Well, it seems that you're looking for an implementation of Any, i.e. a Value Object to which you can assign the real value you receive when calling the function sendMessage and, after, return the value as the result of the doSomething method. According to the documentation of Any A value object that provides an instance of the Any interface. The properties of this interface are a) nullary (one argument) and b) nullable (one argument). Any may be used in place of, or as a generic parameter for, an existing interface. Example: @Data @AllArgsConstructor class AnyValueObject(private val value: Any) { @JvmOverloads fun anyValue(): Any { return value } } Then, you can create your custom Any implementation as follows: @Data @AllArgsConstructor class ResponseMessage(val message: AnyValueObject) Keep in mind that this example is just a representation of what you need, it doesn't provide any official documentation to do this. Q: How to get the name of a variable which is stored as an object in JavaScript? In C#, I can get the name of a variable like this: .NET var name = "nameofvarname"; Console.WriteLine(name); I want something similar using JavaScript. How can I get the name of a variable which is stored as an object? A: You'll have to use eval for the purpose, but it really isn't recommended if your

The Gradient Tool is used to create gradients. You can use the various gradients and patterns in Photoshop to create a variety of effects including feathering, background changes, and texturing. The Pencil Tool draws lines that can be used for numerous effects. For example, you can use the pencils for addition and outlining your images and text. Pen variations help you create artistic effects. You can use fill, stroke and difference pen tools to create different effects. There are many more variations of pens, however, they are more detailed than you may use, or you might be interested in reading about them. In this article, I'll show you how to make a variety of effects using Photoshop tools. The first effect is how to make a gradient using the Gradient Tool: To create a gradient, open the Gradient Tool. Click the Eyedropper tool and sample a color from the image, which you want to change. Draw a few lines by clicking to create the gradients. Repeat this process to create a gradient effect. You can also use shapes to create a gradient. To do this, use the Gradient Tool. Click the Rectangular or Elliptical Tool. The horizontal and vertical lines will draw a shape. Draw a line in the shape that you want to change the color of. Again, use the Eyedropper tool to sample the color from the image. You can repeat the process until you are satisfied with the effect. Another way to create a gradient is to use a pattern. The Setters panel has many different pattern options. This article will cover setting patterns for the Gradient Tool. You can also use patterns from any of the other type tools, including the Brush, Pencil Tool, and Pen variations. Click the Pattern panel. Click the Pattern menu and select one of the options from the list. For example, Drag the Gradient or Stroke patterns from the left menu into the shape that you want to color. Create another line in the same direction. Repeat these steps until the effect is what you want. You can also use a gradient and gradient mask to create special effects. To do this, select the Gradient tool. Click the Gradient menu. In the Gradient drop down menu, select Linear or Radial. I select Linear, since I want a simple gradient. Click the gradient mask menu. Choose Apply Gradient
