Build a few brand new planes to play in combat with three friends. Create a custom loadout suited to your play style to challenge the skies and the ground alike. Fly a plane made for you, with you, tailored to your play style. Create a friend and engage in player versus player matches. Play as ground troops parachuting in from the skies to complete objectives. On the ground, fight to capture objectives and access power plants. Create a base camp and escape it by air as you fight. Burn and destroy everything within your path. Fight in large, open maps. Choose from standard or limited ammunition. Conquer the ground with a tank to use as cover. Stalk your enemy and wait for him to step into a sniper's bullet. Fly like a tank, use ground to air mobility to reach new ground. Wingman anything, if you can reach it. From an inexpensive paper plane to a high end, sleek, multi engine jet, you can create the plane of your dreams. Razed Earth is a game played by land, in the devastated fragments of cities. Ranging from low flying drones to fighting for the highest point, you'll have to develop your own play style if you want to survive. Work in pairs or even in factions to achieve a higher score, stand out from the others and, above all, dominate in the air. As you fight, you'll find yourself in a survival game where you'll have to work to secure fuel, food and medical supplies to build your base. Please note that, because this game is based in devastated areas, survival is not guaranteed. What's new in LogiCally:

— Introductory notes The first part of this series covered Talias quadrangle exploration on the continent; and how a reasonably large portion of its surface was revealed much earlier than originally thought. There were some off-guard secrets hidden on the map, too, if you read the lore of the readers from before. As of now, I'll stop there and start the next several parts from the city of Feren. In the best RPG, friendship is earned as the characters move through the story. You're teamed with dozens of sentient swordswomen through your journey, each with their own strengths, weaknesses, fears, and playful quirks. You collaborate with other powerful players to accomplish quests that spawn powerful allies, or to collect rare treasure, or perhaps scale a mountain of daunting proportions to face a god. The trap 2: Mindlock is an improbable tale about such friendships. Mindlock is an RPG in which YOU are the protagonist. However, the story has no actual protagonist. A small group of sentient characters are the only thing moving the story along. The default map in the game is designed to let YOU explore the world, not move the story along. This article will be to provide a slightly more readable play experience. It will be built in such a way that you can easily discover secrets, and work on an expert level. It will also mention the reputation values of places and what they do. Reputation is a feature unique to this iteration, and is one of the big mods I'll be mentioning. The purpose of it is to make the places feel different and unique even from each other. This tutorial will use NO written information. Instead, it will merely accept input from the player, and tell you where to go next. In reality, you're missing out on the greatest joy of an RPG - the stories that unfold all around you. However, the greater the variety of routes available, and the greater the amount of brainpower and skill needed to gather information from the environment, the better it makes your time invested. Mindlock is a scene-based game, meaning that when you can't go a few specific directions, you'll have to wait until you've got the right item to move from your current situation to your desired goal. This would be indicated by a red & yellow arrow. This will be the only visual cue in Mindlock except for the common bronies, so be as mindful as possible for
