To define the circumstances under which termination of surgery is appropriate and which surgeons are able to do so safely. Literature was reviewed using a questionnaire and by searching the PUBMED medical literature database. Suitable clinical guidelines have been published for emergency operations, for craniotomy, for obstetric surgery and for cannulation of the renal or cerebral arteries. For most non-emergency surgical procedures, the decision whether or not to terminate is the responsibility of the operating surgeon and depends on the factors discussed in this article. Termination of surgery is an uncommon event and carries a relatively high morbidity. However, it should be considered more often by all surgeons and the timing of termination should be guided by the surgical risk, the ability of the patient to tolerate a longer operation and the availability of anesthesia and support services for a patient of concern. Crappuwazzi Crappuwazzi is a word derived from the Uralic word meaning "to burst forth with water". It is a particle that forms the first word in various Uralic languages of Mongolia, Siberia, and Finland (Ugric). In Finnish it is used in the same sense as English phrase over and above. Blockchain technology has huge potential to revolutionise the $400 billion humanitarian aid sector, according to a report from Columbia University. The report reveals that more than $6 billion of humanitarian aid in 2016 was lost to embezzlement, fraud and corruption. The industry is currently held back by poor trust in projects and high administrative costs. Blockchain's potential to tackle these problems is immense. The technology allows for the efficient transfer of funds using cryptographic protocols, without the need of intermediaries. Blockchain's potential value for the humanitarian sector is clear in the report, which outlines the following access to their accounts Allows projects to verify controller contractors Allows for the verifiability of donations that	ractors' records for past claims Increas	ses client autonomy by not revealing their id	lentities or financial records to the
