Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams yesterday said he hoped that the Northern Ireland Executive will 'come to the end of its formation with a view to holding the election in the autumn'. The Executive was agreed at Stormont yesterday following months of stalemate. Northern Ireland Secretary Theresa Villiers last week announced that the new Executive would come into being and serve for three months. The five-party Executive was agreed by DUP, Sinn Fein, the SDLP, Ulster Unionists and Alliance as a result of a deal brokered by John Humphrey, the lead government negotiator for the Ulster Unionist Party. The DUP was given a number of incentives to support the deal, including extra political personnel as well as cash in a bid to strengthen the party in Stormont. Mr Adams said: "I welcome the signing of the agreement and hope that the Executive will come to the end of its formation with a view to holding the election in the autumn. "That's not a final judgement, but my view is that the emphasis should now be on building
