An array of line sensors plane. Each sensor element includes a photosensitive elements arranged in a line along a sensor plane. Each sensor element includes a photosensitive elements and a light shielding portion provided thereon. It has been customary for conventional lens arrays to have a lens element for each sensor element for each sensor element. Although such lens elements have an excellent optical effect, they are heavy and require the provision of corresponding space within the camera. It has therefore been proposed to make a lens array from a monolithic body which integrally comprises both photosensitive and light shielding elements. Such a monolithic body has the advantage that a lens array is compact and lightweight. In this context, the
