The Story: In an unnamed devastated city, a sinister cult is using dark magic and dark rituals to summon evil spirits. To protect the chosen one, the priest decided to resurrect the evil spirit, with the name of Baal. Baal was imprisoned inside an old church and his consciousness was transferred into the soul of the human. Because of this the body of the priest is dead. In the end of the process, the spirit Baal leaves the body of the priest and it is supposed to return to the afterlife. But, don't be naive - the devil never wanted to leave a scapegoat. Baal decided to take revenge on the priest and kill him. The Game Concept: Blood of Darkness is a hardcore 2D shooter about a lustful alcoholic priest who was revived by the devil, and this was his biggest mistake! Blood, occultism, zombies, crucified lustful soucubs, as well as hurricane shooting with realistic physics and calculation of the kinetic energy of bullets and fragments, and all this in pixel art - this is Blood Of Darkness. The game is inspired by the shooters of the late 90s. ===== TOKill Blow Up Eat the Hearts Of the Undead Drink Whiskey Smoke Collect Weapons and Ammo Enjoy! Kings Don’t Deserve Icing Dubnyk Kings fans, deservedly or not, have a reputation around the NHL as among the league’s most loyal fans. However, the event that likely earned them that reputation was Sunday’s budding rivalry with the visiting Chicago Blackhawks. KINGS AND BLACKHAWKS, 2013 (Los Angeles Kings beat New York Rangers, 4-1) - The chaotic first period of the Kings’ emotional, stirring playoff series victory against the New York Rangers on Sunday was a metaphorical prelude to the nightmarish, 5-2 loss at the hands of the Blackhawks on Thursday, at which point loyalty had to have been quantified between the team and the roughly 30,000 fans who were in attendance at that contest. The 'CK's’ had a solid patch of three warmup games in good part due to the lack of Pittsburgh, Anaheim or San Jose in the last two months, and Wednesday’s tilt against the Sharks was just over a week old. The series momentum - after two wins and a loss in Chicago itself - had the home team ahead of the playoff-bound Sharks by a game. The defeat allowed the Sharks to pull the Kings into a one-game lead and now the two Western Conference foes meet again at Staples Center in Game 6 on Monday. Chicago, meanwhile, will begin its much-anticipated trip to the Winter Classic at Chicago’s Wrigley Field Friday vs. the Sharks. It should be an interesting game, and maybe, just maybe, get that the 'Dubnyk has a sore arm' storyline goes away. While the Stars are generally known for producing a bevy of quality goaltenders, they’ve been battling goaltender issues for much of the season due to a patchwork group of NHL-ready netminders. Things are about to get worse for Dallas. With the young netminder Alex Geire
