A direct drive system has been proposed, in which the transfer roller is in contact with the photoconductor drum, so that the surface speed of the photoconductor drum and that of the transfer roller are the same. In the direct drive system, a rotational shaft of the transfer roller is directly connected to a corresponding rotational shaft of the photoconductor drum. A drive force is transmitted from the photoconductor drum through the transfer roller. The transfer roller is driven at the same speed as the photoconductor drum. In the direct drive system described above, however, the mass of the photoconductor drum and that of the transfer roller are different,
