Berry is a Pixel RPG. A 2D RPG with the player in a top-down view. The characters, enemies and assets are created with a pixel art style. Berry has a science fiction setting. Before the events, the Earth was old. But, the Galactic Federation is the civilization who controls the universe. While the Galactic Federation developed until the middle of the 21st century, the evolution of robots and cyborgs grew. There are four types of person in the universe. Person 1: Humans. Person 2: Robots and cyborgs. Person 3: Monsters. Person 4: Aliens. In the galaxy, there are various places like space stations, planets. There are various scenarios like, 'The Old Earth', 'The Storm of Space', 'The Great War on the Planets', and 'The Flood of Space' in Berry. The game is developed with RPG Maker MZ. And RPG Maker is not necessary. You can be the hero with your own idea. And your own dreams. This game is a pixel art game. You can play with or without a controller. To play Berry on computer. Please install the MT-Platform (PlayStation) For Minecraft.net users. Please install the hardware of the following game or version. Windows XP Home Edition or Windows XP Professional. Windows 2003 Standard or Windows 2003 Enterprise Windows Vista Basic SP1 or Windows Vista Business. Windows 7 Starter or Windows 7 Home Basic Windows 7 Home Premium or Windows 7 Professional Windows 8.1 (for 10 years and under) To play on mobile devices: Android (1.2 or later) iOS (8 or later) Windows Phone (8 or later) Any other comments? Your comments are very helpful. There is an optional URL in this game. Yes, I definitely will. Thank you. I think it will be great if it's a continuation. Berry was released, but it wasn't a continuation game. I think it would be great if you worked with RPG Maker MZ. If you don't want to, then I think it would be better if you created it with RPG Maker. I think you can also release it because RPG Maker MZ is so cheap. I think the game looks great, but I personally do not know the technical side of it. If

Deadlands Reloaded: -New Stories by Deadlands Reloaded Creator: Deadlands Reloaded includes a modified D&D 5th Edition game system, allowing for new adventures set in many different (and sometimes strange) locations across the American West. Other changes include updated mechanics such as skills, monsters, and classes, allowing us to utilize many of the rules found in Deadlands Reloaded player's guide and Deadlands Reloaded marshalls. The game system enables us to include new elements and mechanics while making it possible to keep all of the original Deadlands Reloaded setting. Deadlands Reloaded: -Coffin Rock Savage Tale: In our original setting, the Tombstone campaign in Tombstone, Arizona was a well-established mining settlement. However, for this mod, we set up a new Tombstone, forty years later, in the rugged, high-desert country of the Colorado Plateau. This "new" Tombstone has been sliding into hell. -A New Character Creation Scheme: Players will experience many new characters and scenarios in this new campaign, all with different occupations and tales to tell. -The VVVVVV Veteran - A "Badass" new hero to watch out for. -A Second Time Around - With a new Tombstone comes new trouble. A vampire strigoi has been stalking the town and made it his mission to make

Tombstone a place even worse than it is right now. In other words, not a place you want to be. -Gone, But Not Forgotten - The vampires got their comeuppance, but not before they came a long way to do so. Some of the vampires have made it to St. Louis. -Hell Ain't A Bad Place To Visit - Why not? If vampires can go to the phantom town of Felipe, which some believe to be a ghost town, why can't you go somewhere even more horrid? -Shaman's Dead - Rumor has it a shaman is causing trouble at the entrance to the Boot Hill Cemetery. -Beyond the Border - There's more danger beyond the Tombstone you already know. -Additional NPCs - We've got a mystery villain, the Man in Black, a crazy preacher, and a desperate cult determined to save humanity's souls. -New Skirmish Concept - The city of Tombstone is built on unstable volcanic material. It is in the process of sliding into Hell. In order to stay intact as a city, it has to be constantly guarded. There are looked over her shoulder. "You'll have to come," she said. "Too late," said Kubilay. "The rest of the team has left. They were on their way to the bank and Skyler was feeling ill." "Which bank?" asked Coffey. "Leelanau." "Part of our trip?" asked Lottie. Astra looked worried. "Oh dear," she said. Inside, the party was a success. Caroline had a lot of help, and before long there was enough fruit and wine and cheese to begin the feast. Caroline went around the room telling everyone about how much she wanted to learn the Caste. Han and his group had a large industrial cheese that they were eating, and when Caroline spoke about the cheese, everyone started talking at once. When Caroline stopped to collect her thoughts, everyone else seemed to lose their voices at the same time. "You...?" she said finally. "Had to find a meat out there too," said Han. "But it was cold." The rest laughed. It was late, and Caroline had been surrounded by people for hours, so she was starting to feel tired. "So the Governess," someone said, "is she cooked?" "No!" said Caroline. "She's _stirfried_. Like steak." "Did you learn Skyler's language?" asked somebody else. "No, I didn't. But I helped them close their tent and help them eat their candy." "Lots of candy," someone said. "Very sweet of you," said someone else. "She had to learn today," offered Caroline. "They've got to learn to keep their ice-room even if they run into the rain." A couple of the miners laughed and then Lottie touched Caroline's arm. "After this trip," she said, "you'll never again have to worry about ice on the way home." Caroline couldn't help smiling. She was learning and the corn still needed harvesting, but she'd been present for her headstrong oldest brother's wedding, and it had all gone well. As the plates were cleared away, Mrs. Goodchild asked a question. "Were you able to speak with Signora Iarann?" she said, and then turned back to Han. "And whom did you speak with?"
