Puyo Puyo Tetris."I have alopecia in places I never heard of. I'm getting this article in the mail, from some reputable sources," said Eikmann. "It's probably around $15-20." Part of the mystery of the condition stems from the fact that the real number of sufferers is unknown. Since the condition varies from person to person, it's difficult to gather statistics. But, it's suspected to be more prevalent in men than women. More often, the hair doesn't fall out completely, but drops or comes off in clumps. For Eikmann, she has alopecia areata. She's been fighting it for eight years. Eikmann's hair grows normally, but when she goes outside, she notices the hairs on her head starting to fall off. Eikmann gets spots of alopecia on her scalp, neck, and back, but sometimes, the hair on her nose and cheeks seems to disappear. "I take clippers and get my eyebrows shaved," she said. "I make sure to get a lot of the hair and the foundation that holds it all together. It's like a lot of worry and stress." Most people know about alopecia, but the causes for the c6a93da74d
