the history of clocks and watches goes back to as early as the 12th century, when the first mechanical clocks were invented by a german mathematician, scientist, and philosopher called friedrich von hayek. this mechanical clock was first used at the university of nuremberg, and it consisted of a gong, a wooden wheel called a mainspring, and weights. this created the first mechanical clocks, which could be used for both commercial and informal purposes. over time, advancements in technology have made clocks and watches smaller and smaller. today, the history of clocks and watches dates back to the 15th century, when the first pocket watches were introduced. it was at this time that watches first became popular in europe, and the use of pocket watches was commonplace throughout the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. over time, though, the use of pocket watches fell off, as wristwatches began to replace it. the history of wristwatches, though, is a very short one. the wristwatch was invented by none other than george daniels, who was a german-swiss industrialist. the first wristwatches were created for military purposes, so that soldiers would be able to tell time. these watches were created in 1846, and they were metal, with a circular face that could be set for morning, noon, or night. in the early 20th century, stainless steel became the wristwatch's material of choice, and it was at this time that watches were no longer worn on a chain, but rather on the wrist. not only does this make them more convenient to wear, but it also gives them a more elegant look. the history of watches and clocks dates back to as early as the 12th century, when the first mechanical clocks were invented by a german mathematician, scientist, and philosopher called friedrich von hayek. this mechanical clock was first used at the university of nuremberg, and it consisted of a gong, a wooden wheel called a mainspring, and weights. this created the first mechanical clocks, which could be used for both commercial and informal purposes. over time, advancements in technology have made clocks and watches smaller and smaller. today, the history of clocks and watches dates back to the 15th century, when the first pocket watches were introduced. it was at this time that watches first became popular in europe, and the use of pocket watches was commonplace throughout the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. over time, though, the use of pocket watches fell off, as wristwatches began to replace it. 5ec8ef588b
