Although the global information on maternal and child health was the main component of these evidence-based reviews, the committees were not specifically asked to consider risks or safety aspects. The only reference to safety referred to the importance of supervision and surveillance by trained personnel and the critical importance of maintaining and using equipment properly. From the discussions, the committees concluded that although this is a difficult challenge for many health professionals, they must have the attitude that something can be done to change things. The idea is
