Photoshop CS never really felt that much faster than 4. Photoshop 11.x however seems to be the granddaddy of great software. Now that Adobe has made its bed, it has to lie in it. There is no need to work around bugs and bad architecture with the latest release. With each release there is a noticeable upgrade in Adobe's drive towards self preservation. Though, the upgrade to Adobe Photoshop CC from CS2 is not quite that drastic.

The new release (Windows 7) feels somewhat sluggish, but that is due to the fact that I have a relatively old test system for this kind of software. I expect that faster systems will see a much more pronounced improvement. I just upgraded my 5D Mark IV and 11.0.4 to Lightroom CC 3.6. And I'm super happy. After the fire of 5.0, LR is now stable. Easy to use.

The speed of the new Smart Previews is like magic.

I can not live without Lightroom.

I'm recommending it to all my friend who are in the same field – which is everything!
