It doesn't look like it. Some of the members of the BJP we hear about are yes, and others are no. At one level, Sushma Swaraj has simply been giving a yes to BJP President Amit Shah's word and the Supreme Court's decision. In the last five months since the 2005 judgement was pronounced by the Supreme Court, the government has been trying to find a compromise and it is giving it serious thought. But it is not going to change its stand. But just as a review can be requested, there is, I think, a threat of a review of the status of the territories. There is now another party to the dispute, which is in a complete different situation. The Prime Minister's two partners, the Congress and the Nationalist Congress Party, have decided they are willing to share political power. They have committed themselves to it. They have taken the same step, regardless of the status of the Central Government's stand. They, too, are prepared to face criticism. I think the BCCI is not going to accept the Indian Government's decision. The BCCI will begin to tell the Government that it will not pay any annual fee. That will be the beginning of a confrontation. Then, I am sure, the Congress and NCP will be told that no change will be accepted as long as the government is with us. The government will be told that it will agree to change the power sharing arrangements, but if the government is not our government, we don't want to share power with it. I think that
